Dean's Message

I am pleased to present to you our latest edition of In Brief, the magazine of the Case Western Reserve University School of Law. It has been a productive and promising year. We continue to make significant progress in fulfilling our mission of preparing leaders in the practice of law, public and community service, and commerce.

While the tragedy of September 11th profoundly affected our law school community on many levels, the events of this day also serve as a reminder of the importance of the rule of law and our role in preparing students for their futures in our complex and ever-changing world.

In fulfilling the goals of our strategic plan, we constantly enhance and make innovations in the methods we use to teach the law and the classes we offer to students. This issue of In Brief focuses on the advancements we have made in our business law program. We have built a powerful program to give our students the tools to prepare them for careers in business law and commerce. Our voluntary concentration program offers students the option of pursuing in-depth study in the area of business organizations. Additionally, dynamic classes taught by leaders in the field have been added to the curriculum, capitalizing on the expertise of the legal and business communities.

Our faculty, alumni, friends, and students continue to excel, both in and out of the classroom. Dedicated to increasing our school's recognition and reputation, our faculty has produced another impressive collection of scholarship this past year. Alumni and friends shared with us their accomplishments and joined us for many special events, both in Cleveland and throughout the country. Our students remain a source of inspiration with their active participation in the law community and in public service activities. For updates throughout the year on all news, events, and activities at the law school, please visit our website at <http://www.law.cwru.edu>.

As you glance through the pages of In Brief, you will notice that many of our successes are direct outcomes of the generosity of our dedicated alumni and friends. Your support allows us to address urgent issues facing the law school and react to changes occurring in the legal profession and society. We have been able to implement innovative programs, make additions to our ever-expanding curriculum, establish new academic centers, and bring scholars from around the country and world to the law school to share their expertise and expand the students' learning experience.

We continue to move Case Western Reserve University School of Law forward and have you, our graduates and friends, to thank as our constant source of strength and support. We still have much to accomplish and respectfully ask for your continued generosity. I ask you to consider a gift to the School of Law and sincerely thank those who have already made your pledge of support. With your help, we can achieve greatness for our school and its generations of students.

I hope you enjoy this issue of our school magazine. I look forward to working with you to continue our success to ensure a bright future for our school.

Our Leadership in Business and Commerce

Voluntary Concentration Program

Business Organizations is just one of the areas students at Case Western Reserve University School of Law can receive in-depth study through the voluntary concentration program. Other options for concentrating studies are Litigation, Health Law, International Law, Criminal Law, Law, Technology and the Arts, and Public Law, where students have a choice of pursuing the public and regulatory institutions track or the individual rights and social reform track.

To provide graduates with the necessary knowledge and skills to achieve great success in the business world, there is a defined list of courses, both required core and electives, designed to expose students to topics and learning opportunities that will prepare them for their careers. All the concentrations have a similar structure for study but differ in terms of actual courses. The Business Organizations course list shows the depth and variety of topics covered through the voluntary concentration program.

Business Organizations Concentration

Core Course Requirements:

Business Associations (5 credits)
Securities Regulation (3 credits)

Elective Courses (among others)

Financial Principles for Lawyers
Advanced Securities Regulation
Business Planning
International Business Transactions
Mergers & Acquisitions
Sales & Secured Transactions
Secured Transactions
Advanced Contract Law Seminar

Over recent years, various changes in the world and legal practice have fundamentally affected the nature of business law. Case Western Reserve University School of Law has addressed these changes by strengthening our business law curriculum. Our innovative course of study takes a multidisciplinary approach to the complex issues involved in preparing our students for leadership positions in business. Our program provides the core knowledge, theory, skills, and values necessary for successfully representing entrepreneurs and large commercial organizations in a constantly evolving, increasingly dynamic domestic and international marketplace.

In recent years, companies and transactions have become global and the Internet has increased the flow of information and fundamentally altered distribution and the nature of transactions. "Transactional work is increasingly complex because of the inter-relationship of private law questions about subjects such as corporate form and regulatory law," says Andrew Morriss, Associate Dean of Academic Affairs and Galen J. Roush Professor of Business Law and Regulation. Additionally, financing and structuring vehicles have become more sophisticated and new technology-based businesses and industries are emerging and revolutionizing commerce.

While dedicated to providing the best possible classical legal education, the School of Law has introduced an extensive array of experiential learning opportunities to address the societal changes affecting business law. "We recognize the importance of a classic legal education coupled with learning about new fields and ideas," states Gerald Korngold, Dean and McCurdy Professor of Law. "It has been our priority to enhance and build the curriculum and in this case, the business law offerings, to better prepare our students for their real world experiences after they graduate."

Innovations made to the business law curriculum offer students the opportunity to pursue greater depth of study in those areas that are of particular interest to them. In addition to fundamental business law courses, the School of Law offers a wide variety of courses and seminars in the practice areas of Business Regulations and Litigation, Commercial Law, Corporate and Securities Law, Tax Law, and Transactional Work. Students in their second and third year can also participate in faculty-supervised independent research in a variety of business law topics. Under close supervision of a faculty member, students pursue more specified research on a scholarly topic of their interest and earn graded credit for their project.

In addition to specialized courses in key areas of business, the School also offers students the option of pursuing in-depth study in a particular field of concentration. The Business Organizations concentration is one of seven concentrations currently available to students, who choose their area of study in the spring semester of their first year. Upon completion of 15-17 credits of required and recommended courses (with a grade point average of 3.0 or better in these classes), the student is awarded a certificate of successful completion of the concentration. Through the program, students are given the opportunity of gaining in-depth experience prior to entering the work force, giving them an advantage of having more familiarity as they enter their career in the business world.

Understanding the students' need to have more opportunities to expand their analytical skills, the School has also added advanced courses and seminars in the area of business law to its constantly expanding curriculum. "Our strategy has been to build from our strengths in the traditional doctrinal course areas rather than to redo things from scratch," explains Dean Morriss. Seminars such as, "Business Organizations Seminar" and the "Advanced Contract Law Seminar" and advanced courses such as, "Advanced Business Associations: Representing the Internet Start up" are exciting new additions to the curriculum.

Law students benefit from our many ties to the legal and business communities, including having access to experts in their fields who teach some of our special courses. Students learn from someone with extensive experience in management and finance, as well as a legal background. These classes also serve as great opportunities for students to network with a successful businessperson. One such course, "Capital Markets, Venture Capital, and Management Principles for Lawyers," is taught by James Bildner '79, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Tier Technologies, Inc. This course was designed as an introductory course for second- and third-year law students who want to understand the way in which businesses are managed and financed, the various roles that capital markets play in their development, and the methods for measuring business success. Intensive case studies are used as a framework for looking at real world situations. The course integrates guest lectures from visiting business leaders and chief financial officers are brought in to explain how they measure the success of their business and what financial information is required to do their job. In addition, each student evaluates real time business issues, applying the lessons learned from the case studies and modeling the expected outcomes.

The School of Law also offers a dual degree program where students can receive both a J.D. and a second graduate degree. "Law touches every area of our lives, and law certainly touches all areas of business," says Zeke Rodriguez, a student at CWRU School of Law who is currently into his third year of study in the dual J.D./M.B.A. program. "In my law courses, I get an understanding of the rules of the business world and how everything gets accomplished. The study of law and business gels together very nicely."

Four of the dual degrees offered by the law school are in collaboration with The Weatherhead School of Management. In addition to their J.D., students can receive a M.B.A., M.N.O. (Nonprofit Management), or M.A.C.C. (Accountancy). These programs, in most cases, can be completed in four years. The School also offers a dual program where the student can receive a C.N.M., a Certificate of Nonprofit Management, in addition to their law degree.

The School of Law has reacted to the societal changes affecting the legal community with dynamic programs and advancements in the curriculum. We expect more exciting progress for the business law program at the School of Law as we prepare leaders for the business world in the twenty-first century.

Our Alumni—Leaders in the World of Business

Many of our graduates have taken their CWRU law degree into the world of business, holding leadership positions in major companies. Our alumni and their success in the practice of law and business are testaments to the School of Law's tradition of excellence. Douglas McGregor, a 1967 graduate of our law school, finds his law education provided the basis needed for his current role as Vice Chairman and Chief Operating Officer of The Rouse Company. "Law is threaded through every element of real estate development, ownership and management. The core disciplines of real property, contract, corporate and tax, commercial, and even tort law inform both the approach to projects and the framework for problem solution."

The School of Law has traditionally provided graduates with essential tools to succeed in the business world. "In addition to understanding legal principals, my legal education has been invaluable in understanding how to analyze issues, and remembering to look at issues and negotiations carefully and in a structured fashion, and from each party's point of view," says Lawrence Dolin, a 1969 graduate of the School of Law and Chairman, President, and Chief Executive Officer of Noteworthy Medical Systems, Inc. in Cleveland, Ohio. Katherine Hatton, a 1980 graduate of our law school and Vice President and General Counsel of Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc., comments, "Legal education is great training for work as a lawyer and in business. Law school heightened my ability to analyze issues, see connections between seemingly disparate concepts, and devise creative approaches to problem-solving."

Graduates of the School of Law proudly represent the School's dedication to providing the best possible educational experience for its students. Continued innovations and advancements in the business law curriculum will continue our success in preparing students for their careers after they graduate.

Highlighted are just a few of our distinguished alumni leaders in the business arena. In effort to maintain current information, we ask that all alumni working in the business area contact Anne-Marie E. Connors, Director of Alumni Relations and Development to update their information as needed. #### Advice To New Graduates:

"Take a couple of years (hopefully employed) to gain perspective on your real career interests. That maturation and experience is necessary before making commitments that may wind up lasting a lifetime. When you are about to graduate, it seems like you need to make the decision and get immediately committed or you will have fallen behind. There is time, the road should have some turns in it, and selecting that road will make for a more interesting journey. You may want to practice law initially and then apply the legal training in business or government. A few years experience will provide a solid grounding for that decision."

Bildner Fellows Program in Law, Business, and Technology

James L. Bildner

CWRU School of Law
Class of 1979

"I use the core skills that I developed at CWRU Law School all the time in my role as Chief Executive Officer of Tier. In a world where our clients must make core technology changes at the speed of light, being able to make solid judgments in real time is a must."

In the past two years, the School of Law has added over fifty new courses to the curriculum to expand the learning experience in a variety of areas for students. Some of these new courses are offered in dynamic, new formats to further engage students, especially those focused in a specific area of study. New methods of delivering subject matter, such as the one-credit course, allows flexibility in scheduling for both students and professors as well as offers new educational opportunities for students.

As part of the expansion of the dynamic offerings in the area of business law, the School of Law now offers the "Bildner Fellows Program in Law, Business, and Technology." This program, made possible by the generosity of alum James Bildner '79, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Tier Technologies, Inc., is a direct result of the interest of Mr. Bildner and the vision of the School of Law to make an immediate impact in the advancement of the business law program.

The Bildner Fellows Program brings together real-world business and government leaders in a small group setting to engage in a dialogue on emerging issues in business, technology, and the law. The law school selects two business or government leaders as distinguished guests and also selects as Fellows, twelve law students, six law alumni, and six faculty members. These Fellows meet for day-long group conversations with the distinguished guest for two days. A facilitator leads the sessions, and readings are assigned and discussed. Additional conversations are encouraged to occur between the two sessions to continue dialogue.

Widely praised by the students, faculty, and alumni who participated, the first session of the Bildner Fellows Program featured Declan McCullagh, cyber-libertarian, tech journalist, and Washington bureau chief for Wired News. McCullagh is an important figure in current policy debates over law and technology. An award-winning journalist, McCullagh writes and speaks frequently about technology and politics. He argues that the government poses the chief threat to the Internet. It is this controversial stance that prompted Stanford law professor Laurence Lessig, considered the foremost leader in the field of cyber law and founder of Stanford's Center for Internet and Society, to title the final chapter, "What Declan Doesn't Get," in his most recent book, Code & Other Law of Cyberspace. The chapter highlights both McCullagh's importance and his disagreement with Lessig. This discussion session with Declan McCullagh was led by Andrew Rутten, an instructor in Stanford's political science department.

The highly anticipated second session will feature Mitch Adams, the President of The Massachusetts Technology Consortium—a public/private consortium to advance technology in Massachusetts. He was previously the Massachusetts Commissioner of Revenue from 1991-1998, executive director of a law firm, and a dean at the Harvard Medical School. Andrew Rутten, the moderator of the first session featuring Declan McCullagh, will also lead this second session.

Current Position:

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer at Tier Technologies, Inc. (NASDAQ: TIER) in Walnut Creek, California.

James Bildner joined Tier Technologies, Inc., a business and IT consulting company, as Chairman of the Board in November 1995 and became Chief Executive Officer in December 1996.

Society of Benchers

Inducts 11 New Members

The stormy evening of September 21, 2001 marked the thirty-ninth annual meeting and dinner of the Society of Benchers held at the School of Law. The weather however, did not dampen the spirits of those who attended the black tie affair, including many of the new members honored this year. Dean Gerald Korngold kicked off the evening's festivities followed by inspirational speeches by Society of Benchers Chair, Robert Reitman and Annual Fund Co-Chair, James Koehler. Professor Emeritus Ollie Schroeder presided over the induction of the ten alumni members and one faculty member, bringing the member total to 242 alumni, 34 public members, and 17 members of the faculty inducted since the Society's inception in 1962. The Society of Benchers recognizes graduates of the Case Western Reserve University School of Law and other leaders for distinguished service to their profession and communities.

Frederick K. Cox International Law Center

By Hiram Chodosh, Director and Professor of Law and Alice M. Simon, Manager of Academic Centers and Law Journals

Celebrating its tenth anniversary this past fall, the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center continues to distinguish itself through innovations in international legal education. During the past year, the Center introduced a wide range of curricular reforms: a special concentration in international law; a new advanced research program for second-year students; experiential learning opportunities in immigration, including a new lab and two simulation courses in asylum and high tech visa applications; and a new human rights course in which students study, discuss, and attend lectures organized around the Center's symposium, "International Crimes Against Women."

And this past fall, in response to contemporary world events, the Center coordinated an ongoing forum to address consequences of the September 11th terrorist attacks.

The Center's investments in co-curricular programs have been remarkably successful. The Niagara Moot Court Team swept its competition, achieving victory in nearly every category. As the first U.S. venue, the Center also hosted the Jean Pictet International Humanitarian Law Competition, sponsored by the Red Cross.

In conjunction with the Center, the Journal of International Law published its fourth major multi-year symposium, generating publications by the world's leading scholars and jurists, including Professor Harold Koh and Professor Peter Schuck of Yale, Richard Epstein of Chicago, and Justice Richard Goldstone of the South African Constitutional Court and Chair of the U.N. Kosovo Commission.

The Center's summer internship program has provided unique employment opportunities for students in human rights (Human Rights Watch and Amnesty International), security (Interpol), trade (the U.S. Commerce Department and the International Trade Centre in Geneva), and patent law (Uganda and Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, Hungary).

Of particular note, the Center assisted in the development of a new Klatsky Program in Human Rights, made possible by a generous gift from Bruce J. Klatsky, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Phillips-Van Heusen Corporation. A graduate of Adelbert

College (1970), Mr. Klatsky has served on the University Board of Trustees since 1995. His gift supports the Klatsky Seminar in Human Rights and two summer internships at Human Rights Watch. Mr. Klatsky serves on the Board of Human Rights Watch, a nonprofit, non-governmental organization dedicated to the protection of human rights worldwide. The first two student fellowships were awarded for summer 2001, enabling students to work for Human Rights Watch in its New York City and Washington, D.C. offices.

The Klatsky Seminar was inaugurated in fall 2001 with a visit from International Law Professor Harold Hongju Koh of Yale Law School whose talk on "A Human Rights Strategy for the Era of Globalization" will be published in the Case Western Reserve Journal of International Law. A leading scholar in the field, Professor Koh served as Assistant Secretary of State for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor in the Clinton Administration from 1998-2001.

In addition to these special programs, the Center and the Journal sponsored two major events in response to the September 11th attacks and will publish a special issue dedicated to the implications of the attacks and the U.S. response for legal education later this spring.

Panelists for the first forum addressed the topic, "U.S. Foreign Relations and International Legal Issues." Speakers included: Ambassador Charles Dunbar, who served in Afghanistan and the Middle East; our law professors Henry King, a Nuremberg prosecutor and Sidney I. Picker, Jr., founding director of the Cox Center; and CWRU political science professor Kenneth W. Grundy. Panelists at the second forum, "Domestic Issues," included: American Civil Liberties Union attorney Jillian Davis; and our law professors Lewis R. Katz, a Fourth Amendment expert and David W. Leopold, an immigration attorney and adjunct professor. Also speaking were: Ramez Islambouli, Executive Director of Muslim Campus Ministry; Professor Sam Thomas of the CWRU Weatherhead School of Management; and CWRU English professor Theodore S. Cup, a best-selling author and former writer for The Washington Post.

The Center's endowment also allowed the School of Law to add to its international law faculty, with the visit of Professor Michael C. Davis from Chinese University of Hong Kong in the fall of 2000, a visit by Cambridge University Professor John Tiley, considered the leading tax expert in the European Union, and the full-time appointment of Assistant Professor Jacqueline Lipton, an expert in transnational and international private law.

The faculty enjoyed a productive year of publications and lectures in over twenty foreign countries on a wide range of issues this year: comparative judicial reform to international financial regulation; the Middle East peace process to the implementation of intellectual property law in the developing world; employment and labor law reform in South Africa to international commercial law in Central Europe; and international criminal justice to Russian legal reform. ■

9/11 Forum

Professor Hiram Chodosh, Director of the Cox Center, set the tone for the "9/11 Forum" programs at the first forum:

"The stories and events that have emerged since September 11th leave us both united and torn. History will judge these events in part by how we respond."

We are united as a country that values freedom and peace; united behind the heroism of our firefighters, policemen, rescue workers, and many others who have died. United as a larger family of nations who lost many of their own in the tragedy, who have lost their tolerance for a growing and elusive enemy."

Yet we are also torn. Torn between the deep shock—the vacuum left by our collective loss—and the profound need to rebuild. Torn between the need to respond with anger—to retaliate, to incapacitate—and the need to recommit ourselves to the value of life and human rights. Torn between our needs for increased security and passions of patriotism on the one hand, and on the other our commitment to the country's deepest foundations of diversity, dissent, and civil liberty."

With our hearts still sunk in sadness, it is important for us to emerge out of the rubble. As an academic and professional community, we must do what we do best: to pose tough questions, to listen carefully, to reflect with tolerance and sensitivity, to think creatively as we claw our way out of what has collapsed upon us. It is our humble way of fighting against the September 11th assault, of mitigating its damage, of playing a modest role in reducing the risks of future harms."

Biotech in Northeast Ohio

The Law-Medicine Center provided a forum to discuss leading-edge health law issues last April when it hosted "Biotechnology in Northeast Ohio: Current Plans and Visions for the Future." Presenting the conference fulfilled an important part of the Center's mission to offer students and the law school community opportunities to examine current issues and research in the evolving field of health law. The School of Law and the Law-Medicine Center sponsored the event with the support of a grant from The Generation Foundation. The Edison BioTechnology Center and the CWRU Program in Genetics, Ethics, and Law contributed program planning assistance.

Professor Maxwell J. Mehlman, Director of the Law-Medicine Center acted as moderator for the "Bio-Tech in Northeast Ohio" conference on April 11, 2001. Other speakers pictured are Frank Samuel, Jr.; Christopher Coburn; Huntington Willard; and Dorothy Baunach.

Dean Korngold and Law-Medicine Center Director Professor Maxwell Mehlman welcomed more than 200 participants to the daylong conference, including biotech researchers, venture capitalists, legal practitioners, entrepreneurs, and members of the press. James Kovach, Executive Vice President and COO of Athersys, Inc., moderated the morning session. Guest speakers included Dorothy Baunach, Deputy Director of Cleveland Tomorrow and Interim President of Edison BioTechnology Center and Frank Samuel, Jr., Science and Technology Advisor to Governor Taft. Baunach and Samuel described current efforts and future plans to develop the biotechnology industry in Ohio and state programs in science and technology.

Representing the two major Northeast Ohio hospital systems, Huntington F. Willard, President of the Research Institute of University Hospitals of Cleveland and Christopher Coburn, Executive Director of CCF Innovations, and COO of NovaMedics, Inc., The Cleveland Clinic Foundation, discussed their efforts to apply research and technology achievements to commercial enterprise.

Former CWRU president David Auston opened the afternoon session with the keynote address, which focused on the potential for the university to become a hub or catalyst for public-private partnerships in biotechnology.

Following the keynote were: Lila Feisee, Director of Federal Government Relations and Intellectual Property at the Biotechnology Industry Organization (BIO) in Washington, D.C.; Kathy Hudson, Assistant Director of the National Human Genome Research Institute at the NIH; David Blumenthal, Director of the Institute for Health Policy at Harvard University; and Professor Craig Nard, who joined our law faculty this year. Nard focused on the effect of intellectual property issues on university research settings, while Feisee offered the biotech industry perspective. Hudson described the Human Genome Project and its possible application, while Blumenthal discussed the potential for conflict of interest in biomedical research.

Selected talks from the biotech conference will be published in Volume 12:2 of Health Matrix: Journal of Law-Medicine, due out in spring 2002. By publishing this material, student editors are able to further integrate current research into their understanding of the field. ■

The Law-Medicine Center 2001 Review

The Law-Medicine Center, founded 48 years ago, was created to equip students for careers in health law, a field that has grown dramatically in scope and complexity over the years. What began as a program focused on forensics has expanded to include bioethics, public health policy, medical malpractice, and many other issues. The Center's role includes offering a curriculum designed to prepare students for careers in health law, contributing to scholarship in the field, and enriching the learning environment by bringing in speakers and experts in health law and related fields.

The Health Law Clinic, under the direction of Professor Louise McKinney, is a related program that gives students an opportunity to provide legal services to low-income and under-represented clients. During spring 2001, law students participated in the Medicaid Restoration Project, assisting some of the 25,000 people in Cuyahoga County who were improperly dropped from the Medicaid rolls during a 1997-1999 period of welfare reform.

The Health Law Clinic also offers students summer research and work opportunities. The Saul S. Biskind Public Interest Law Fellowship Program, which began in 2001, made it possible for five students to receive summer fellowships that supported work in public interest law. This year's student placements had a health law focus.

Summer fellowship awardees worked on an AIDS project in Uganda, at the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy in Washington, D.C., for Legal Services of Southern Piedmont, North Carolina on a public benefits project to help mentally disabled people inappropriately discharged from rest homes, and for Families USA, a national advocacy organization working to increase health coverage for uninsured, low-wage workers and their families. Additional grants from the Student Public Interest Law Foundation enabled students to work for the Office of the General Counsel, Department of Health and Human Services, and at Fogarty International AIDS consortium in Uganda. ■

Lecture Descriptions

Arthur W. Fiske Memorial Lecture

Alice Fiske White established this lectureship in 1988 to honor her brother's devotion to CWRU and his abiding interest in legal education. Arthur Fiske, a 1931 graduate of Western Reserve's Adelbert College and 1933 graduate of our law school, spent virtually his entire career—fifty years—as head librarian of the Cleveland Law Library Association.

Sumner Canary Lecture

The School of Law established the lecture in 1980 to honor Judge Sumner Canary, a 1927 alumnus, a well-respected lawyer, and a distinguished public servant. Judge Canary practiced law in Cleveland as a solo practitioner then in a partnership in the firm now known as Arter & Hadden. He also served as U.S. attorney for the Northern District of Ohio and was appointed in 1967 to the Ohio Court of Appeals for the Eighth District. Except for time spent in public service, he was with Arter & Hadden from 1942 until his retirement in 1972.

Frederick K. Cox
International Law Center Lecture
The International Law Center at CWRU School of Law was established by the George Gund Foundation in 1991 to generate and disseminate knowledge about comparative, transnational, and international legal issues. It was renamed in 1994 to honor Frederick K. Cox, president and treasurer of the Gund Foundation for more than 20 years, and a dedicated friend, advisor, 1938 law school alumnus, and long-time member of the University's Board of Trustees. The Center offers courses, special lectures, conferences, visiting faculty and scholars, joint programs with foreign universities, summer internships, and opportunities for foreign study—tying law students, faculty, and the greater community, to ideas and institutions around the world.

"Why Global Law Firms Should Care About Diversity: Five Lessons from the American Experience"

The Arthur W. Fiske Memorial Lecture • April 19, 2001

Professor David B. Wilkins is the Kirkland & Ellis Professor of Law and Director of the Program on the Legal Profession at Harvard Law School. Since joining the Harvard faculty in 1986, Professor Wilkins has written numerous articles on the legal profession, with a particular emphasis on the experience of black lawyers in corporate law firms. His scholarship on these issues will soon include his forthcoming book on black corporate lawyers based on information derived from interviews with more than 200 lawyers, tentatively titled, The New Social Engineers: The Making of the Black Corporate Bar and What It Means to America.

The Constitutionality of Campaign Finance Reform Sumner Canary Lecture • April 3, 2001

The Honorable Ralph K. Winter was appointed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in December 1981 and served as Chief Judge from 1997 to 2000. At the time of his appointment to the bench, Judge Winter was the William K. Townsend Professor of Law at Yale Law School, where he had served as a full-time faculty member since 1962. In addition to his recognized service in many prestigious public and government positions, Judge Winter has received numerous awards, including the Federal Bar Council's Learned Hand Award for Excellence in Federal Jurisprudence.

From the 2001–2002 Lecture Series

"Prosecuting Rape as a War Crime"

Frederick K. Cox International Law Center Lecture • October 3, 2001

Since July 1994, Richard J. Goldstone has been a Justice of the Constitutional Court of South Africa. During 1998, he chaired the group who drafted a Declaration of Human Duties and Responsibilities for the Director General of UNESCO (the Valencia Declaration). Justice Goldstone served as the Chief Prosecutor of the United Nations International Criminal Tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda from August 1994 to September 1996. Since August 1999, he has been the chairperson of the International Independent Inquiry on Kosovo, is currently National President of the National Institute of Crime Prevention and the Rehabilitation of Offenders, and heads the board of the Human Rights Institute of South Africa. Justice Goldstone has received local and international recognition for his work, including the International Human Rights Award of the American Bar Association in 1994.

"Private-Interest Buyers and Politically-Elected Sellers: Who's Zoomin' Who in Campaign Finance Reform?"

The Arthur W. Fiske Memorial Lecture • October 16, 2001

Fred S. McChesney is the Class of 1967 James B. Haddad Professor of Law at Northwestern University School of Law. Considered a leader in doing legal work from an economics perspective, his primary scholarly teaching interests are in the areas of business and antitrust law and their intersection with economic theory. Professor McChesney has written numerous articles and several books in these fields including, Antitrust Law: Interpretation and Implementation (1998 with C. Goetz), Economic Inputs, Legal Outputs: The Role of Economists in Modern Antitrust (1998), Money for Nothing: Politicians, Rent Extraction and Political Extortion (1997), and Causes and Consequences of Antitrust: The Public Choice Perspective (1995 with W. Shughart). Prior to his appointment at Northwestern, he taught at Cornell Law School, Emory University, and served as Associate Director for Policy and Evaluation for the Federal Trade Commission.

"The Role of the Public University in American Higher Education" The Frank J. Battisti Memorial Lecture • October 25, 2001

Lee C. Bollinger is currently President of the University of Michigan and a member of the faculty of their law school. In July 2002, he will be leaving Michigan to become the 19th President of Columbia University. His primary teaching and scholarly interests are focused on free speech and First Amendment issues, and he has published numerous books, articles, and essays on these and other subjects, including two highly acclaimed contributions to First Amendment literature, Images of a Free Press (1991) and The Tolerant Society: Freedom of Speech and Extremist Speech in America (1986). After serving as law clerk for Judge Wilfred Feinberg, U.S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit and for Chief Justice Warren Burger on the U.S. Supreme Court, he joined the faculty of the University of Michigan Law School in 1973 and in 1987, was named the Dean, a position he held for seven years. He became Provost of Dartmouth College and Professor of Government in July 1994 and was named the 12th President of the University of Michigan in November 1996.

The Klatsky Seminar in Human Rights

The first Klatsky Seminar in Human Rights in collaboration with the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center of Case Western Reserve University School of Law took place on November 1, 2001. We were honored to have guest speaker Harold Hongju Koh, Professor of International Law at Yale Law School and one of the foremost authorities on international human rights, present his lecture entitled, "A Human Rights Strategy for the Era of Globalization."

Harold Hongju Koh is the Gerard C. and Bernice Latrobe Smith Professor of International Law at Yale Law School, where he has taught since 1985. From 1998 to 2001, he served as Assistant Secretary of State for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor. A Marshall Scholar and a graduate of Harvard, Oxford, and Harvard Law School, Professor Koh is the author of more than 70 articles and several books, including Deliberative Democracy and Human Rights (Yale 1999 with R. Slye), Transnational Legal Problems (2d ed. 1984 with H. Steiner & D. Vagts), and The National Security Constitution (Yale 1990), which won the American Political Science Association's Richard Neustadt Award as the best book on the American Presidency published in 1990. He has been recognized with five honorary degrees and numerous awards for his human rights work and was named by American Lawyer magazine as one of America's 45 leading public-sector lawyers under the age of 45.

Immediately following Professor Koh's lecture, the School celebrated the tenth anniversary of the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center. Since its inception in 1991, the Center has developed national attention for comparative and international legal education and scholarship through its offerings of courses, special lectures, conferences, visiting faculty and scholars, joint programs with foreign universities, summer internships and opportunities for foreign study—tying CWRU students and faculty, as well as the greater community, to ideas and institutions around the world.

The Klatsky Seminar in Human Rights was established in 2000 to provide a forum for teaching, programming, and scholarship in human rights law. 2001 marks the inaugural year of the seminar, and the program this year was presented in collaboration with the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center of Case Western Reserve University School of Law. The Klatsky Seminar was made possible by a fund established with a generous gift by Mr. Bruce J. Klatsky. Mr. Klatsky, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Phillips-Van Heusen Corporation, is a graduate of Adelbert College (1970) and has served as a member of the University Board of Trustees since 1995. Among many activities, he serves on the Board of Human Rights Watch, a nonprofit, non-governmental organization dedicated to the protection of human rights worldwide.

The Ault Symposium

In response to the ever-changing legal environment, the School of Law proudly hosted the Jonathan M. Ault Symposium: Professional Responsibility and Multi-Disciplinary Practice on November 9, 2001. This all-day program brought together speakers from the academy, practicing bar, and the accounting profession to share their perspectives and experiences on the changes the traditional structure of legal practice is facing today. Influences such as market pressures, demands of clients, and the voices of some lawyers are demanding new types of collaborative arrangements with non-lawyers. This symposium examined how this trend will affect traditional ethical prohibitions against fee-sharing and non-lawyer partnerships and the economic forces pushing for change in the organization and management of professional groups.

The symposium consisted of three panels, each having a principal speaker with several commentators and moderators, followed by a segment of time allotted for audience participation and discussion. Robert P. Lawry, Professor at the School of Law and Director of the Center for Professional Ethics at CWRU, served as program chair as well as speaker and moderator and began the day's program along with Dean Gerald Korngold who offered the opening remarks. The first panel discussion of the program, "Ethical Issues Presented by MDPs" was lead by Professor Lawry (Laurel Terry, Professor of Law at Penn State Dickinson School of Law was the original speaker but was unable to attend the program at the last moment). Carole Silver, Senior Lecturer and Co-Director of the Law and Social Science Program at Northwestern University School of Law

Andrew Bailey, Professor of Accountancy at the University of Illinois, Robert P. Lawry, Professor at the School of Law and Director of the Center for Professional Ethics at CWRU, and Frederick J. Krebs, '75, President of the American Corporate Counsel Association presided over the next panel, covering the topic, "The MDP Challenge in the Context of Globalization." The third panel entitled, "Comparative Multi-Disciplinary Practice of Law: Paths Taken and Not Taken," was presented by Charles W. Wolfram, the Charles Frank Reavis Sr. Professor of Law Emeritus at Cornell University Law School, which was followed by the final segment for the day covering the topic of substance abuse. ■

The Jonathan M. Ault Symposium: Professional Responsibility and Multi-Disciplinary Practice was made possible by a fund established in memory of Jonathan M. Ault who received his J.D. from our law school in May 1983. His father, Charles R. Ault, and mother, Janice, were instrumental in establishing this fund in their son's honor. Charles Ault received a B.A. from Adelbert College in 1948 and his J.D. from our law school in 1951, and joined the Cleveland firm now known as Baker & Hostetler. Mr. Ault received the Law Alumni Association Fletcher Reed Andrews Award in 1989, and became a member of the Society of Benchers at the law school in 1980.

Carole Silver, Senior Lecturer and Co-Director of the Law and Social Science Program at Northwestern University School of Law addressed the audience for the second panel discussion.

New Endowment Funds

We are pleased to report a number of approved endowment funds. We extend our deepest gratitude to those individuals and organizations who have made their creation possible. This past year, the CWRU Board of Trustees established four new endowment funds to benefit the law school.

William Alexander Brahms Lecture Fund

Through the generosity of William A. Brahms, '51, the William Alexander Brahms Lecture Fund was endowed and approved by the CWRU Board of Trustees on February 24, 2001. This fund will support a lecture series at the School of Law focusing on topics and scholars concerning religion in the teaching and practice of law.

The Honorable Natalie K. Finn Endowment Fund

Natalie K. Finn, '72 has provided funds to establish The Honorable Natalie K. Finn Endowment Fund at the School of Law. Endowed in December 2001, the fund supports education and research at the School of Law.

Edward F. Green Endowment Fund for Financial Aid

The School of Law is grateful to the late Edward F. Green, '48 for his generous bequest to the school. The third of his endowment funds, the Edward F. Green Endowment Fund for Financial Aid was established in August 2000 to provide financial support to students enrolled at the School of Law.

Bruce J. Klatsky Endowment Fund

The establishment of the Bruce J. Klatsky Endowment Fund has provided the School of Law with several important programs. Through a generous gift by Bruce J. Klatsky, the endowment supports two summer internships for students at Human Rights Watch in New York City and Washington, D.C. It also provides funding for The Klatsky Seminar in Human Rights, established in 2000. The seminar provides the School of Law with a forum to highlight important Human Rights issues and to bring scholars in this area to the School of Law. November 1, 2001 marked the inaugural seminar, which was presented in collaboration with the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center of Case Western Reserve University School of Law.

Endowment Funds

Establishing an endowment fund at CWRU for the School of Law is a permanent, lasting way to memorialize your education and enable the law school to provide the best possible programs for future students. Endowment funds are also meaningful ways to honor family members and friends. These funds are donated assets held by the University in perpetuity and invested to generate income to be spent for purposes designated by the donors. Your investment in the School of Law will perpetuate our strong tradition of "giving back" to the next generation of students.

Donors establish endowment funds with three types of gifts: outright gifts; deferred gifts; or bequests.

Outright gifts are contributions to the law school made with cash, stocks, bonds, real estate, or property, such as antiques or collectables. These gifts are deductible on your income tax return and are not subject to gift or estate taxes.

A deferred gift is held in a trust to produce income for a donor-designated beneficiary over his or her lifetime or a term of years. At maturity, the gift is converted to a named endowment fund.

A bequest, a gift in one's will, is also not subject to gift or estate taxes. Like an outright contribution, a bequest can be a gift of cash, stocks, bonds, real estate, or property.

Development Notes — The Planned Gift

Planned or deferred gifts to the Case Western Reserve University School of Law provide donors with the opportunity to support the school's tradition of academic excellence while earning dividends on their investment for themselves or their heirs. Through planned giving, benefactors can earn lifelong income, cut capital gains costs, receive significant income tax deductions, reduce or eliminate estate taxes, and establish a named endowment fund that will exist in perpetuity at the school. The estate planning professionals at CWRU work closely with donors and their financial planners to be sure that everyone receives the greatest possible benefit from making a gift to the law school. Your fund and the income it provides will continue to grow in perpetuity.

Deferred gifts offer many benefits and allow donors to:

- Increase investment or retirement income
- Reduce estate taxes
- Help with children's or grandchildren's college expenses
- Provide for disabled family members
- Provide income to someone you wish to acknowledge in a meaningful way
- Assist the CWRU School of Law in its continued quest to provide quality and innovative educational programs for future students

Davis Reading Room Dedication

The law school held a dedication ceremony for the library's Davis Reading Room on May 29, 2001. With a generous gift from the family of the late Harry L. Davis, Jr., 1937 graduate of Western Reserve University, the law school was able to refurbish the reading room and update the furnishings and lighting. The room is dedicated in memory of Mr. Davis' father who had served as Governor of Ohio and Mayor of Cleveland. The area, with its beautiful view of the Cleveland Botanical Gardens, is one of the most popular seating areas in the Law Library. ■

The 2001–2002 Annual Fund

June 30, 2002 marks the end of the fiscal year and the last date for contributions to the 2001–2002 School of Law Annual Fund.

Annual Fund dollars allow us to be a truly fine institution and to fulfill our mission of preparing leaders in the practice of law, public and community service, and commerce. Because Annual Fund dollars are used in the same year that they are received, each gift has an immediate impact on the quality of education at CWRU School of Law, thereby strengthening the school and enabling CWRU to compete effectively with top law schools.

Your gifts are used for:

- Scholarships
- Faculty support
- Strengthening the library
- Expanding the academic experience
- Enhancing the curriculum by bringing visiting lecturers, scholars, and other distinguished guests to the school

Matching Gifts

Many companies offer a matching gift program to compliment an employee's charitable giving. If you work for a matching gift company, be sure to get a form from your employer and send it to us with your gift.

Gifts of Stock

By transferring stock directly to CWRU, you can avoid capital gains tax while providing support to the School of Law. To initiate such a gift, contact Melissa Santee, Director of the Annual Fund at the School of Law at 216-368-3308 or 1-800-492-3308.

Please refer to the postcard insert in this issue for further information on "giving back" to CWRU School of Law.

Last Year....The 2000–2001 Annual Fund

Thanks to the support of 2,249 law alumni and friends, the Annual Fund reached an all-time high of $916,761 last year—an 11% increase over the $822,295 raised in the 1999–2000 fiscal year and the highest amount ever raised for the Fund. Even more impressive is the fact that the Annual Fund has increased 70% since 1997! Special thanks to James Hagy and James Koehler for their service as co-chairs of the 2000–01 Annual Fund. Over $2.3 million in other gifts were raised during the 2000–2001 academic year.

Admissions

By Barbara F. Andelman, Associate Dean for Student Services, Enrollment Planning, and Special Programs

We had an outstanding year in admissions last year. Here are a few highlights:

We increased our LSAT median for the class enrolling in this fall of 2001 two points above the median for the class enrolling in the fall of 2000, moving the average LSAT for the mid-way point in the class to the 75th percentile from the 67th percentile.

Keeping the class the same size as in 2000 (around 220), we significantly decreased the percentage of applicants accepted to fill the class this year. This past year, we accepted 54% of applicants, while the previous year we accepted 67% of applicants.

We increased applications for the class entering this past fall by 5.9% over the prior year. Since 1997, we have increased our applications by 25%, compared to a national increase of 19%. ■

Demographics for the 2001 Entering Class:

57% are from outside of Ohio, from 32 different states; 44% are women, and 14% are people of color; 120 undergraduate colleges are represented in the student body. Among the top ten feeder schools in this year's first-year class are the University of Michigan, Cornell, Duke, and Miami of Ohio.

New Initiatives

We have a commitment not to just maintain our admissions efforts, but to constantly evaluate the effectiveness of our many different programs, to identify and anticipate changes in the admissions picture, and to quickly respond to such changes and implement new efforts almost immediately.

Among the initiatives implemented last year were:

- Immediate email notification of admitted status and scholarship award
- Email notification of all events, such as admitted student open houses
- Travel stipends for highly-qualified applicants from outside of Ohio so that they can visit the law school
- Publication of a comprehensive manual for admitted students containing information about law student services, the University, and living in Cleveland, as well as a listing of alumni willing to be contacted by admitted applicants
- Aggressive solicitation of highly credentialed out-of-state applicants
- Email congratulations from faculty
- An on-line application (available now on our website)

I am looking forward to another great year in admissions. What makes this point in time in our history so exciting is that we now have the programmatic strength to be able to take advantage of the anticipated continued rise in applications to really attract the best and the brightest to the law school. The enhancements that we have made to our curriculum—including the seven new Concentrations, the fifty new courses we've added over the past two years, and the outstanding new faculty who have joined us—serve to greatly enhance our competitiveness in the admissions marketplace. ■

Student Services

By Barbara F. Andelman, Associate Dean for Student Services, Enrollment Planning, and Special Programs

This past summer, we did some restructuring of administrative departments, creating a new Department of Student Services.

The creation of this department represents a significant and thoughtful rethinking of how we provide services to our constituents, from their days as a prospective student through their time here at the law school. Our goal is to ensure that we give them a consistently high level of service and a top-rate experience at the law school.

The Department includes the offices of Admissions, Financial Aid, and Student Services. This past year, we also welcomed some new staff into the department:

New Staff

Christopher Lucak, Director of Admissions, worked in the admissions office at Oberlin College for six years, where he served as Senior Assistant Director of Admission. He also gained important graduate school admissions experience at Florida Atlantic University, where he served as Associate Director of Admission and Director of Recruitment and Operations for four of the University's seven campuses.

Patricia Kim, Assistant Director for Admissions and Student Services, received her J.D. from The Ohio State University and her M.S. in Psychology from Kent State University. She has taught at the college level and has significant experience in research methodology.

Melody Stewart, Director of Student Services, came to us with extensive experience in the area of student services, having served six years as Assistant Dean for Student Affairs at Cleveland-Marshall College of Law.

The Law Alumni Association of Case Western Reserve University School of Law held its annual meeting and luncheon on November 16, 2001 to acknowledge the generosity of alumni, faculty, and the Cleveland legal community to the School of Law. Board President and Annual Fund Co-Chair, James Koehler '73 provided opening greetings for the program and led the election of new board members. Dean Korngold spoke to the capacity crowd at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in downtown Cleveland and with James Koehler, presented the 2001 Law Alumni Association awards. Annual Fund Co-Chair, James Hagy '78 expressed sincere appreciation to the Cleveland legal community for their ongoing support of the School of Law's Annual Fund. Lewis R. Katz, the John C. Hutchins Professor and Director of the Graduate Program for Foreign Students in U.S. Legal Studies at the School of Law offered powerful closing remarks for this year's luncheon.

Centennial Medal

Daniel L. Ekelman '52

Daniel Ekelman graduated Order of the Coif and second in his class from CWRU School of Law in 1952. He joined the Cleveland law firm now known as Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP as an associate upon graduation and became partner in 1958. He was elected the firm's Administrative Partner in 1967 and served on both the Executive Committee and the Finance Committee from 1967 to 1992. Mr. Ekelman was Senior Partner from 1992 until his retirement in January 1996.

Daniel Ekelman '52 thanks the audience after receiving the Law Alumni Association's highest honor, the Centennial Medal

He specialized in corporate law and developed the firm's government law and public finance practice, and counseled the City of Cleveland during the Voinovich administration. For the School of Law, he has served as a class agent, Chair of the Annual Fund, as a member of the Board of Governors, the Visiting Committee, and the Oversight Committee, and was elected to the Society of Benchers in 1983. Mr. Ekelman has been a trustee of Brentwood Hospital for over 30 years, Vice Chairman for eight years, and trustee of South Point Hospital. He has also served as trustee of the Brentwood Foundation and the Greater Cleveland Hospital Association.

"Clearly he [Daniel Ekelman] is the most exceptional person

I have known in my life with excellent judgment, superior intelligence and a terrific understanding and appreciation for his fellow man."

— John D. Wheeler '64

Distinguished Teacher

Kathryn Sords Mercer '83

Kathryn Sords Mercer has three degrees from Case Western Reserve University: Juris Doctorate, magna cum laude, 1983; Master in Social Service Administration, 1983; and Ph.D. in Social Welfare, 1997. She began her career as an associate at Walter, Haverfield, Buescher & Chockley in 1983. She joined our law faculty in 1984 as Professor of Lawyering Skills and remains as an instructor in a variety of areas, including Alternative Dispute Resolution, Family Law, Law and Public Policy, Law and Social Work, Lawyering Process, and Research, Analysis and Writing. She implemented the current research and writing program at the law school, and created a new curriculum for the program, which integrated manual and computer-assisted legal research, legal reasoning, objective and persuasive writing, some drafting, and fact investigation. She has held numerous appointments, including: Associate Editor and Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of the Legal Writing Institute; Board Member of the Legal Writing Institute; Program Chair for the Section on Legal Writing, Reasoning and Research at the 1995 AALS Annual Meeting; and Board Member of the Duke University Alumni Directors. Professor Mercer has given many presentations and written numerous publications, currently co-authoring a book on Legal Writing to be published by Lexis Law Publishing Company.

Kathryn Sords Mercer '83 received the Distinguished Teacher Award from presenter M. Ann Harlan '85

"Professor Mercer not only has dedicated years and years to the CWRU Law School and its students, she has managed to form close bonds with many students along the way. Katy is well-published and well-respected in her field."

Honors Faculty, & Friends

"With a penetrating intelligence and a crusading spirit, Ray Vasvari has spent ten years fighting for the cause of free speech. Ray's work has helped to define the boundaries of the First Amendment, his career defines the role of the public interest lawyer."

—Kevin O'Neill '84

Distinguished Recent Graduate

Raymond Vasvari '91

Raymond Vasvari received his J.D. from our School of Law in 1991 and graduated cum laude from Harvard College in 1987. He worked with Ulmer & Berne before establishing his own practice in 1993, with an emphasis on civil rights and employment discrimination law. Since 1993, Mr. Vasvari has been involved with the American Civil Liberties Union of Ohio Foundation, serving first as a member of its Cleveland Chapter Board, and for six years as a member of its Ohio Board of Directors. He has been Legal Director for the ACLU of Ohio since January 1999. His practice includes a substantial number of First Amendment Speech and Establishment Clause cases, as well as a number of cases involving student rights, due process issues, the rights of minorities, and of traditionally disenfranchised groups. He is a frequent commentator in the national media on a wide variety of legal issues. In addition to his work with the ACLU, Mr. Vasvari has been involved with several civic organizations, and has served as a trustee of Fairmount Presbyterian Church and as an admissions interviewer for Harvard College. He was also the recipient of the Cleveland Bar Association's Young Lawyers' Section Service Award in 1997. ■

Reunion 2001

Alumni from around the country and world returned to their alma mater for a weekend of reunion festivities and rekindling friendships. On June 1, 2, and 3, 2001, Case Western Reserve University School of Law welcomed back those classes celebrating a reunion milestone—the classes of 1956, 1961, 1966, 1971, 1976, 1981, 1986, 1991, and 1996—as well as members of the Barristers Golden Circle—those graduates who received their degrees more than fifty years ago.

In addition to activities open to all alumni, the School of Law hosted reunion class parties at the Marriott at Key Center in downtown Cleveland. All class years gathered to reminisce and mingle with friends from their law school days. The 2001 reunion also marked the inaugural year for the LL.M. Reunion in Cleveland.

Rise to the Challenge!

Reunion Giving Challenge

Reunion classes of

1952, 1957, 1962, 1967, 1972, 1977, 1982, 1987, 1992, 1997

All Reunion classes are competing for the highest percentage of alumni giving and for total dollars raised for the 2001-2002 Annual Fund Campaign. The date for the Law Alumni Reunion is quickly approaching on June 7-9, 2002.

Show leadership among your classmates! We hope you will rise to the challenge and contribute in honor of your reunion year. When you receive a letter or phone call, please respond generously. To make a donation, refer to the postcard in this publication, call the Office of Development and Public Affairs, or go online at <http://www.law.cwru.edu/alumni/> to make your gift by credit card. All gifts given towards the challenge must be received by June 30, 2002. Forthcoming publications of the Alumni Reunion Update Newsletter will track class giving.

Whether you graduated five or 50 years ago, there's no better way to commemorate graduating from the CWRU School of Law! Please make your Annual Fund Gift in honor of your reunion today!

Public Service Summer Fellowships Available to Students

The generosity of our alumni and friends enables Case Western Reserve University School of Law to offer students unique opportunities for growth and learning both in and out of the classroom setting. Through funds established by generous gifts from donors, the School of Law currently offers up to 25 fellowships each year, available to current students who wish to pursue public service opportunities during the summer.

Fellowships

Biskind Public Interest Summer Fellowships

Each year, CWRU law students are eligible for the Saul S. Biskind Public Interest Summer Fellowships. To qualify, students must do public interest legal work for ten weeks during the summer at a nonprofit organization. The 2001 summer recipients were employed with the following organizations: Families USA in Washington, D.C., the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy in Washington, D.C., the Domestic Violence Center in Cleveland, Legal Services of Southern Piedmont in Charlotte, NC, and the Fogarty International AIDS Consortium in Uganda. Upon completion of their summer employment, the student is invited to speak to the student body at the School of Law about his/her experience, serve as an advisor for law school public interest law projects, and is encouraged to seek additional funding in order to continue work in the area of public interest law.

2001 Recipients of the Saul S. Biskind Summer Fellowships:

John Kevin Coker

Amy Marie Klosterman

Marie-Jeanne Simone Leduc

Tanya Elizabeth Norwood

Jennifer Andrea Woods

Biskind Fellow—John Kevin Coker

Kevin Coker spent most of his summer break in 2001 in Kampala, Uganda under the auspices of the Fogarty International Center and CWRU Director Chris Whalen, M.D. (MED '84, GRS '92) on a project to gain an understanding of the accessibility of antiretrovirals in the community and see how other professional communities such as the business and legal community could help the medical community. Though the primary source of funding was the Biskind Fellowship, Kevin received additional funding for his project from the School of Law's Frederick K. Cox International Law Center and the Student Public Interest Law Foundation (SPILF), two other resources for fellowships and grants offered to students at the School of Law.

Kevin worked with medical, legal, and human rights experts on how to increase access to antiretroviral drugs, spending most of his time at inner city and rural hospitals interviewing doctors, researchers, nurses, midwives and other healthcare workers on what they believed were the main issues surrounding AIDS and care for those with HIV. "It was a life changing experience in many ways. It opened me up to worlds I had only read about. It was indescribable on the impact it had on me."

When asked if the experience changed his life, Kevin's immediate response, "More than you'll ever know."

Biskind Fellow—Amy Marie Klosterman

Amy Klosterman worked as a Justice System Advocate at the Domestic Violence Center in Cleveland for ten weeks this past summer. "I selected this organization based on its dedication to empowering women against relationship violence, and the experience of working there has reinforced my interest in combating gender violence." The Center provides a large range of services, from counseling for victims, children of victims and batterers, to shelters for emergency situations. It also runs numerous training programs on domestic violence issues for law enforcement and justice system personnel.

Amy worked in the Center's Justice System Advocacy Program where the main goal is to provide domestic violence victims with someone who will be present in the courtroom, on their side and who can assist them in the process. As far as her specific duties, Amy explains, "I spent about 70% of my summer doing victim-based work such as assisting victims in court, or going to support groups, or following up with victims I'd met in court who needed assistance with the ongoing justice system process. I spent the other 30% of my time researching state law about the rebuttable presumption against batterers getting joint custody."

Amy found the internship an invaluable addition to her law school education. "This kind of experience helps round out my legal education. I am very grateful for the opportunity to have worked with the Domestic Violence Center this summer. I strongly believe in the value of legal services for those in society who are traditionally victimized and who have miniscule resources to cope with their problems, and the Saul Biskind Fellowship is a wonderful resource for students who want hands-on experience in under-funded public interest positions."

"...the Saul Biskind Fellowship is a wonderful resource for students who want hands-on experience in under-funded public interest positions."

Biskind Fellow—Marie-Jeanne Simone Leduc

Simone Leduc's Biskind fellowship led her to The Center for Reproductive Law and Policy, a legal advocacy organization, in Washington D.C. during the summer of 2001. During her ten week internship, she served as an International Legislative Intern, working on international legislative issues. Her duties were varied: she lobbied both the House and Senate; worked closely with an attorney on preparing for meetings and conferences; and set up Senate Committee hearings on concerns the organization had regarding U.S. foreign policy and appropriations. Simone also researched and analyzed the U.S. State Department's annual Human Rights abuse reports.

When asked if the experience changed her life, Simone replies, "Life-changing, definitely! I realized all of the things attorneys CAN be—they can be advocates for causes, they can effectuate change for millions of women worldwide, while staying within the boundaries of their country, they can raise awareness to issues and problems globally, they can be very well-educated, and dedicated and enthusiastic about what they do."

The experience has also helped Simone decide her career path. "I would like to thank the Biskind fellowship for the gracious expenditure on my legal education. It was an invaluable gift that truly made an impact on my life—personally and professionally."

Biskind Fellow—Tanya Elizabeth Norwood

Beth Norwood served her fellowship at Legal Services of Southern Piedmont in Charlotte, North Carolina from May 2001 through July 2001 and at Central Carolina Legal Services in Greensboro, North Carolina from May 2000 through July 2000. She successfully represented several domestic violence clients in court in order to renew their protective order. Beth also taught a community education course on legal rights and responsibilities once a week to women who were receiving public benefits. Additionally, she researched housing and public benefits issues and wrote memos, and interacted with social services and the local housing authority in this capacity.

Beth is very enthusiastic about her fellowship. "It was a great experience! I was fortunate to work with many great people who assisted in affirming my career goals." Like other student recipients of the fellowships, it only confirmed her career intentions and gave her a glimpse of what her career might be like. "I intend to work in public interest law so it gave me an opportunity to see what everyday life is like for a legal aid attorney. It's also enhanced my ability to understand my clients in the law clinic."

Biskind Fellow—Jennifer Andrea Woods

The Biskind Fellowship allowed Jennifer Woods to serve an internship at Families USA, a nonprofit organization in Washington, D.C. This organization works to promote quality health care for all Americans.

While at Families USA, Jennifer was housed in the health policy department. She was responsible for authoring a report used in the debate over the patient bill of rights, which was cited on the Senate floor numerous times. Through the course of the summer, she also obtained a practical understanding of the lobbying process by attending hearings and conducting research. "I had a very rewarding summer. I consider myself very lucky to have played such a primary role in the debate over the Patient Bill of Rights, and I like to think that something I personally worked on helped to improve the status of health care in America."

Although still undecided in her career path, Jennifer was happy to have gained a strong understanding of the fundamentals of the practice of law. She feels her experience provided her with "an outstanding foundation in the issues surrounding the field of health law. I am truly grateful for the generosity of the Biskind family. Without their help, I would not have been able to undertake this outstanding opportunity."

Fellowships

Klatsky Human Rights Fellowships

Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Bruce J. Klatsky, Chairman and CEO of the Phillips—Van Heusen Corporation and member of the University's Board of Trustees, the Frederick K. Cox International Law Center offers two CWRU law students summer internships at Human Rights Watch in New York City or Washington, D.C. Human Rights Watch is an independent, non-governmental organization dedicated to protecting the human rights of people around the world. Along with the fellowships, Mr. Klatsky's fund also supports the Klatsky Seminar in Human Rights, an annual lecture at the School of Law to feature human rights scholars and topics.

2001 Recipients of the Klatsky Fellowships:

Elizabeth M. Antall

Anne F. Moore

Klatsky Fellow—Anne Moore

Anne Moore's Klatsky Fellowship took her to the Washington, D.C. office of Human Rights Watch as a legal intern in the Women's Rights Division. Throughout the summer, Anne conducted legal research on a wide range of issues including virginity testing in Turkey, command responsibility for rapes committed in Kosovo, and the trafficking of women to the Balkans.

As a result of her supervisor's trip to Bosnia to conduct field research on Bosnian brothels and the plight of trafficked women, Anne received the opportunity to work and be recognized on a Human Rights Watch report, which summarized the research results of the trip. She also drafted a letter to the Prime Minister of Turkey condemning the Turkish Government's reinstatement of virginity testing of high school girls, which received significant press coverage. The Turkish Government ultimately reversed their decision and put an end to the testing.

Anne feels very fortunate to have worked with such a gifted staff at Human Rights Watch, stating, "Everyday they go to work and read about horrible, horrible human rights abuses and yet they keep going, fighting the good fight, and manage to remain hopeful. I hope to continue to work in the field, but even if I don't I will always carry with me a heightened respect for and awareness of human rights issues."

"With human rights work, it is difficult to get your foot in the door," Anne says. "The Klatsky Fellowship gave me a wonderful opportunity to work not only in human rights, but for one of the most prominent and highly regarded human rights organizations in the world. It was an amazingly rewarding experience."

"The Klatsky Fellowship gave me a wonderful opportunity to work not only in human rights, but for one of the most prominent and highly regarded human rights organizations in the world. It was an amazingly rewarding experience."

Adelstein Environmental Law Fellowships

The Stanley I. and Hope S. Adelstein Environmental Law Student Summer Grant is awarded to a CWRU law student who secures an environmental law-related internship or employment in the public interest field. Students are asked to share their experiences with classmates and address the student body at the School of Law after completing their summer internship.

2001 Recipient of the Adelstein Environmental Law Summer Grant:

Wendy Carson Bright

Adelstein Fellow—Wendy Carson Bright

Wendy Carson Bright spent ten weeks as a summer legal intern at Ohio Public Interest Research Group ("PIRG") in Cleveland Heights, Ohio. During her summer, she scrutinized proposed Ohio air pollution permits submitted to the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, specifically focusing on the monitoring, compliance, reporting, and record keeping sections of the permits. Wendy also investigated and documented opportunities for citizen enforcement of Clean Air Act noncompliance in Ohio and developed a Citizen's Guide to filing Verified Complaints. She prepared background papers on recent Clean Air Act court decisions and/or pending Clean Air Act litigation.

Wendy is very appreciative of the funding for her wonderful experience and thanks Mr. and Mrs. Adelstein for the opportunity. She specifically points out that "testifying at a United States Environmental Protection Agency hearing in Cincinnati regarding New Source Review under the Clean Air Act was a great educational experience that would not have been possible without the Adelstein's generosity."

With an undergraduate degree in Environmental Resource Management and a long-standing interest in preserving the environment, Wendy feels her experience was "outstanding." Wendy explains, "The goals and mission of the Ohio PIRG were directly in line with my personal beliefs. It was a joy working with individuals who possess the same commitment to the conservation of the environment as I do. My experience with the Ohio PIRG reinforced even more my desire to practice environmental law."

"[My] great educational experience, that would not have been possible without the Adelstein's generosity...reinforced even more my desire to practice environmental law."

Women's Law Association

Closely affiliated with the Ohio State Bar Association, the Women's Law Association provides a forum for all students to discuss issues that are important to women in law school and in their future careers. Both men and women are welcome to contribute, benefit, and participate in the Women's Law Association. As a group, they encourage a sense of inclusiveness for women in the law school and promote the ideal of women providing women with a source of support, strength, and guidance.

Second-year law student, Simone Leduc is the current president of the association. Simone and the other WLA officers and members, have made significant strides in increasing the association's visibility and involvement in the school community. "My goal, as President of the WLA this year, is to stress that the WLA is a professional women's organization; one that is closely affiliated with professional groups that have high profile women working for their place in the legal profession, while balancing family concerns, community involvement and the like."

With this goal in mind, the WLA has attempted to mix fun with practicality, community service with job resources, and philanthropy with mentorship support. Thus, the organization's activities are as varied as its membership. Last year, the organization sponsored many events including networking opportunities with local women attorneys. They sponsored clothing drives for "Dress for Success" (for women) and "Career Gear" (for men), which are organizations that collect job or interview-worthy clothing for indigent people. They also supported a local food drive and raised over $600 for "Race for the Cure." Other programs have included a discussion by women attorneys concerning their changing roles in law firms, a discussion by a distinguished professor on equality in employment, and a seminar on sex discrimination in the workplace. In addition to philanthropic and educational events, the WLA sponsored several social events to give members of the law school community the opportunity to meet and get to know second and third year students, as well as faculty and alumni.

To build resources and connections, the group's most recent activity was a continuing legal education event on March 5, 2002. They co-sponsored this special program entitled, "Networking for the Woman Lawyer" with the School of Law's Career Services Office and the Office of Development and Public Affairs, along with The Cleveland Bar Association Women's Section. The program, held at the School of Law, offered one hour of CLE credit for participation and consisted of a primary discussion complete with a facilitator and a panel.

Cheryl A. Warren
Director of Marketing, Buckingham, Doolittle & Burroughs, LLP
Legal Marketing Association Member-at-Large

The group has held regular meetings to encourage participation within the student body population. Amy Klosterman, WLA vice president of internal affairs, explained the statement the group is trying to make through their programming plan: "As an organization, WLA is not necessarily out to make strong statements about feminism or women's issues....however, I believe that many of our members would agree that we, as women, need to make it clear that we expect nothing less from the legal profession than equal opportunities and respect."

Simone added, "We are excited, as a group, to truly make this organization one that is well known, well respected, and useful as a resource for our members. This group is so important because we, as women, are still the minority in the field of law. We want to give women the tools, connections, and resources to succeed. This is the importance of the Women's Law Association!"

Commencement 2001

The School of Law's one hundred and seventh annual commencement was celebrated on the picture-perfect afternoon of Sunday, May 20, 2001. At the School of Law, candidates gathered with their families at a reception in honor of the Class of 2001. As in years past, J.D. and LL.M. students were then led to the historic and newly-renovated Severance Hall by the Dixieland Band for the 4:30 p.m. ceremony. The hall was brimming with the pride and excitement of family, friends, and alumni as the 239 candidates received their much-anticipated diplomas. Congressman Lincoln Diaz-Balart, one of the School of Law's most distinguished and respected graduates, served as this year's speaker.

Lincoln Diaz-Balart is a 1979 graduate of the School of Law. Since 1992, he has served in the U.S. House of Representatives for Florida's 21st Congressional District, which includes much of western Miami-Dade County. Prior to this, he won a special election for an open seat in the Florida State Senate, and won re-election in 1990. He began his political career in 1986 with election to the Florida House of Representatives, and was re-elected in 1988. Before his career in politics, he worked for Legal Services of Greater Miami, as an assistant state's attorney in Miami, and as a partner in the law firm of Fowler, White.

In 1999, the publication Congressional Quarterly named Diaz-Balart to the "CQ 50," its list of effective and influential members of Congress. The following year, a poll conducted for Hispanic Magazine placed him among the ten most influential and credible Hispanics in the U.S.

Following Congressman Diaz-Balart's inspirational speech, Dean Korngold awarded the diplomas, including those who received their degrees in August 2000 and January 2001. We are proud of academic excellence displayed by the J.D. Class of 2001: 14 students graduated magna cum laude (GPA of 3.65 to 3.89) and 41 graduated cum laude (GPA of 3.40 to 3.64). There were three students who truly excelled at the school, graduating summa cum laude (GPA of 3.90 or higher): Susan Melville Eastman, Shannan C. Krasnokutski, and Emery G. Lee, III. These students were also elected to the Order of the Coif, a national law school honor society founded to encourage scholarship and to advance the ethical standards of the legal profession. It admits those graduates whose grades rank them in the top ten percent of the class. Here is a complete listing of the J.D. Class of 2001 graduates who were elected to the Order of the Coif:

John Joseph Allotta
Stephanie Renee Bender
Nicole Elizabeth Braden
Lindsey Ann Carr
Susan Melville Eastman
Molly S. Hamby
Paul Thomas Kostyack
Shannan C. Krasnokutski
Emery G. Lee, III
Christopher Seth Maynard
Harry Kirkland Meadows
Kara Christine Ryf
Michelle Loser Schaefer
Louis Vitale
Robert Loren Wagner
Jennifer Ann Walker
Sean Anthony Watterson
Audra Leanne Webb
Andrea Lynn Whitaker
Marguerite Elizabeth Zinz

In addition to the presentation of the J.D. diplomas, 15 graduates received their LL.M. in Taxation and 38 foreign trained lawyers were awarded with their degrees, a LL.M. in U.S. Legal Studies, six graduating with honors:

Imer Xhafer Berisha
Kai Bitter
Masami Hasegawa
Kow Orleans Lindsay
Chetan Nagendra
Igor Volodymyrovych Ulyanov

Many awards were presented during the ceremony, including the Student of the Year Award. This year, the Class of 2001 chose Kevin Robert Walsh as the graduating student who best exemplified outstanding scholarship and excellence in extracurricular activities. While graduating magna cum laude and Order of the Coif, Emery G. Lee, III was also honored with many accolades and awards including the Society of Benchers' Cum Studiis Tum Moribus Principes, which is given to a member of the graduating class eminent in academic work and character. The Student Bar Association presented their annual awards for Teacher of the Year, awarded to Paul Giannelli, and the Dennis J. Jenks Memorial Award, which went to Carole Zalokar in the School of Law's Registrar's Office. ■

Chairing Ceremony

On October 2, 2001, the School of Law hosted a chairing ceremony for two superb faculty members who were named to chaired professorships: Kevin C. McMunigal as the Judge Ben C. Green Professor of Law; and Andrew P. Morriss as the Galen J. Roush Professor of Business Law and Regulation.

The Judge Ben C. Green chair was established in 1989 and in 1999, it was expanded to a full professorship by a gift from the Green family. It is named in memory of the Honorable Ben C. Green, who was appointed to the federal bench by President John F. Kennedy in 1962 and served twenty years as Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio. We are grateful to Roe Green, who attended the ceremony, Mrs. Ben C. Green, and their proud family tradition of philanthropy.

The Galen J. Roush Professor of Business Law and Regulation at Case Western Reserve University School of Law was established in 1977 by the GAR Foundation in memory of Mr. Galen J. Roush, a 1922 graduate of our law school. Mr. Roush was the co-founder and Honorary Chairman of Roadway Express and was a leader in the trucking industry. At the time of his retirement at the age of 83 in 1975, Roadway was the largest motor freight common carrier in the U.S. We sincerely appreciate the support of the GAR Foundation and the family of Mr. Galen J. Roush and thank them for their generosity.

Kevin C. McMunigal has been named the Judge Ben C. Green Professor of Law at the Case Western Reserve University School of Law. Professor McMunigal joined the CWRU law faculty in 1986 as an assistant professor, and was promoted to associate professor in 1989 and professor in 1992. A native of Philadelphia, Professor McMunigal received a J.D. from Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California at Berkeley, where he was articles editor of the California Law Review, and a B.A. from Stanford University. He teaches Criminal Law, Evidence, and Professional Responsibility. Professor McMunigal came to our school after service as an Assistant United States Attorney in the Northern District of California. Earlier, he clerked for Judge William H. Orrick of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California and worked as an associate at Heller, Ehrman, White & McAuliffe in San Francisco. Professor McMunigal is recognized as a leading voice in the fields of criminal law, evidence, and the legal profession and has written extensively in these areas as well as various aspects of legal teaching. Currently, he is under contract for a casebook on criminal law with Aspen Press. Professor McMunigal is a member of the American Bar Association, its section on Criminal Justice, the California Bar Association, and the Executive Committee of the Professional Responsibility Section of the Association of American Law Schools. Since joining CWRU School of Law, he has held visiting appointments at the University of California's Hastings College of the Law in San Francisco and Loyola Law School in Los Angeles. In 1989, Professor McMunigal was recognized for his dedication and excellence in teaching when he was selected as the CWRU School of Law Faculty Member of the Year.

Andrew P. Morriss was appointed the Galen J. Roush Professor of Business Law and Regulation at Case Western Reserve University School of Law. He joined the law school faculty in 1992 as an assistant professor, was promoted to associate professor in 1995, and to professor in 1998. He received a Ph.D. in Economics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and graduated with high honors with a J.D. from the University of Texas at Austin School of Law. Professor Morriss also holds a master's degree in Public Affairs from the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin and received his A.B. from the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University. He teaches courses in property, law and economics, employment law, administrative law, and undergraduate courses in law and economics and environmental economics. Professor Morriss is one of the country's leaders in law and economics and the use of empirical research on legal questions. He is an active speaker and prolific writer, having authored or co-authored numerous law review articles and book chapters. Before coming to Case Western Reserve University School of Law, Professor Morriss clerked for United States District Judge Barefoot Sanders in Dallas, Texas. Additionally, his career includes a clerkship with United States Magistrates John B. Tolle and William F. Sanderson, Jr. in Dallas, and service as a staff attorney and branch manager for Texas Rural Legal Aid in the Farm Worker Division. In July 2000, Professor Morriss was named the law school's Associate Dean for Academic Affairs. In addition to his law school appointments, he is a senior associate at PERC—The Center For Free Market Environmentalism in Bozeman, Montana and a contributing editor of Ideas on Liberty, the monthly magazine of the Foundation for Economics Education.

"Law Students' Undergraduate Major: Implications for Law School Academics Support Programs," 69 University of Missouri-Kansas City Law Review 533 (2001) (with Mark Graham).

Other Accomplishments:

In Summer 2001, Professors Adamson and McKinney received an award for participation in and contribution to the Coalition to Monitor Medicare Managed Care, 1996-2001. The Coalition operated for five years in Cuyahoga County. Professors Adamson and McKinney were representatives of the law school, which was a charter member of the Coalition. As part of the Health Law Clinic responsibilities, one or two enrolled students participated in the work of the Coalition each academic year, doing research, presenting issues, and acting as kind of in-house counsel for the Coalition under Professors Adamson's and McKinney's supervision.

After four years of extraordinarily dedicated and excellent service, Bryan Adamson asked to relinquish his duties as Assistant Dean for Student Services and return to full-time teaching as a member of our faculty in the Milton A. Kramer Law Clinic Center. (effective June 1, 2001) Dean Adamson has done a magnificent job on behalf of our students and law school. His intelligence, creativity, and humanity are a source of inspiration to all of us who work with or interact with him. Dean Adamson has built a highly successful and responsive student services operation, and for that we are all truly grateful.

Professor Adamson was elected to the Clinical Legal Education Association Executive Committee. Professor Adamson was also elected to the Executive Committee of the AALS Section on Clinical Legal Education. (2000-2001)

Professor Peter Junger Retires

After serving with distinction for over thirty years as a member of the law school faculty, Peter D. Junger retired at the end of the 2000-2001 academic year.

Professor Junger received his A.B. and LL.B. from Harvard and practiced for nine years with the prominent New York City law firm of Patterson, Belknap & Webb. He became a member of the faculty at our law school in 1970.

During his academic career, which also includes visits at the law schools of the Ohio State University and the University of Miami,

Professor Junger taught courses in the areas of property law, natural resources, remedies, equity, and computers and the law. His intellectual curiosity has led him to delve into other fields ranging from environmental law to the First Amendment, enriching the experience of his students and faculty colleagues for over thirty years. In 1999, Professor Junger was honored by the School of Law's Alumni Association as the recipient of the Distinguished Teacher Award.

We all thank Professor Junger for his dedicated service to our school and students over the years.

Class Notes

By Beth Hlabse

Class of 1949

Bennett Yanowitz received the American ORT Cleveland Chapter's Jurisprudence Award during the May 31, 2001 dinner in Cleveland. The Award goes to the members of the legal community who have substantially improved the quality of life of others, been a role model, and provided innovative leadership.

Class of 1950

While maintaining his law practice in Cleveland, Victor H. Hahn writes children's books and participated in the 25th Anniversary of Book Affaire, a reception, luncheon and author autograph party in Beverly Hills, California. Benefits from the event went to the expansion of community outreach programs. Under Seven Locks Press, Mr. Hahn's The Adventures of Frank the Friendly Frogasaurus and Family was published in 1999, and Frank the Friendly Frogasaurus Meets T-Rex in the Forest in 2000.
